

Q-Boat

Valley Canoe Products (VCP)

Atlantic Kayak Tours Says: The Q-Boat is for midium sized paddlers who loves the Anas Acuta, but would like a faster, better tracking kayak that can accommodate a larger paddler. The Q-Boat was called the Qajariaq. It has a keyhole cockpit (not what we like, but what the market is demanding). This is still a new boat to use so more will be added once we get a few more miles paddling it.

VCP Says: Quajariaq (in Greenland Inuit, “Sea Kayak”) is, as the name suggests an Inuit style composite sea kayak with hard chines and narrow beam. The Q-Boat has a low afterdeck to allow for various types of Greenland style rolls. The kayak has an impressive clipper-type bow and very little rocker suggesting a fast ocean machine. The Q-Boat is equipped as other VCP composite kayaks with three watertight curved fiberglass bulkheads, three watertight VCP hatches, cable operated retractable skeg system, perimeter deck lines and bungees (installed using recessed deck fittings), compass recess accommodating a Brunton 70P and a wide comfortable backstrap as well as Yakima footbraces. The kayak is built with a standard keyhole cockpit. The standard Qajariaq is produced in a fiberglass/diolene hybrid lay-up. Two lighter Kevlar lay-ups are also available by special order.
